It was lovely to showcase the work of the residents, and see their faces light up when they showed their work to their relatives. Everyone was amazed by the standard and that people with dementia could produce such great pieces of art. Many favourable comments - my first exhibition but definitely won't be my last. One residents' quote comes to mind - "Who said only Van Gogh can paint!" The resident in question sat guarding their piece of artwork during the whole exhibition, excited to talk with anyone who stopped to view.

Wilma, Chamberlaine Court Care Home resident and Lottie, Emma Brain, the Care Home Manager's daughter. They both loved taking part in the Kusama themed Arts In Care Home workshop.

"We love to see the joy and wellbeing that art and creativity bring to our clients, who are extremely proud of their artistic achievements. Our care home residents and their carers were amazed to see the finished pieces of artwork at each session. Just the most amazing event to be part of. The exhibitions looked fabulous, with so many homes involved. Many homes managed to take a few of their residents along to have a look too."

Annette Falkingham and Max Adams - Creative Mojo Coventry, Nuneaton & Warwickshire

"Working with Annette, from Creative Mojo Coventry & Nuneaton has given our residents the ability to navigate the blocks dementia has caused, by allowing them to be creative in a well-structured and organised session.

Annette has encouraged our residents to express themselves through art. They are 'in the moment' when taking part in a project and the moment has connected with their heart and helped their emotional well-being.

The projects increase their sense of achievement through the "grand artwork reveal" at the end of each of our sessions.

Annette is always positive, happy and encouraging. It has been a pleasure to work with her, and on a personal level, I have learnt a great deal from her, using art therapy as a way of connecting with our residents."

Lin Guntrip – Senior Activity Coordinator at Herald Lodge Care Home, Coventry

Vera – Resident at Harper Fields Care Home, Balsall Common
